PRESS RELEASE

California Editing Firm Moves to Annapolis, MD Sticks and Stones opens its virtual doors

Annapolis, MD, February 10, 2016 – Sticks and Stones, an editing firm specializing in individual and business development services, opened its virtual doors today in Annapolis. It was previously located in Northern California. Owner Jamie Calloway-Hanauer says of the move to Annapolis, “I am thrilled to re-launch in a town as beautiful and historic as Annapolis. I have no doubt that Sticks and Stones will thrive in the strong local economy, and while we provide services worldwide, I am eager to begin partnering with local businesses and individuals.” Prior to opening Sticks and Stones (SNS) in 2013, Calloway-Hanauer was a public interest attorney and elected official in Northern California.

Sticks and Stones works with a wide range of clientele to polish and hone any form of the written word, including copy, press releases, websites, and manuscripts, among others. Its services also include ghostwriting and book proposal and pitch development for submission to agents, publishing houses, journals, and magazines. SNS is proud to offer reduced-rate services to non-profits, places of worship, and government organizations.

For more information on Sticks and Stones, please email snsedits@gmail.com. You can also find SNS on Facebook at /snsedits.com, and read more about them at the SNS website, www.snsedits.com.
